Innovations in Practice

To make emergency contraceptives and family planning supplies more accessible, FPCI distributes free family planning kits to anyone who needs them by working with mutual aid organizations and organizations serving refugees and survivors of domestic violence and sexual assault. Individuals can request emergency contraception online through FPCI's website. FPCI also distributes the kits at community events such as Pride, Juneteenth, and Iowa's Annual Conference for LGBTQIA+ Youth. The kits include condoms, lubricant, pregnancy tests with urine cups, and two doses of emergency contraception. To increase community awareness of Title X, the kits also have information promoting Title X services. FPCI also gave more than 1,000 kits to subrecipients to use for promoting Title X in their communities. These kits include a reproductive health guide that talks about contraception and other resources available in the state. Looking ahead, the grantee hopes to expand these efforts to include at home STI testing kits.

Did You Know?

FPCI started an affinity group for its FQHC subrecipients to share strategies that address the unique challenges these service sites face providing care under Title X, such as administrative challenges and weaving sexual and reproductive health care more seamlessly into their primary care workflows.

Every year FPCI, along with a medical committee, selects a quality improvement project. This year it is focusing on STI testing and treatment given higher STI rates across the state in recent years. The project director will use FPAR data on current STI rates as a baseline to track progress at subrecipients and to help identify any area with a higher need. FPCI will also host monthly check-in calls with subrecipients to discuss related strategies and challenges. A past quality improvement project focused on HPV vaccine uptake. The grantee also used FPAR data and monthly calls to track how often vaccines were offered and to gather information on the reasons why patients declined.

FPCI has been building partnerships with sexual assault and domestic violence organizations at the state and local level to better understand the unique needs of these clients and to connect them to Title X services. FPCI partners with the Iowa Coalition Against Sexual Assault and the Iowa Coalition Against Domestic Violence. The grantee is also working with the Monsoon Asians and Pacific Islanders in Solidarity, an organization that serves survivors of domestic violence, sexual assault, and human trafficking in Asian and Pacific Islander communities. Through this partnership, FPCI works to increase access to free or inexpensive emergency contraception and gain a better understanding of client needs.
