Innovations in Practice

To enhance SRH and support services for birthing persons in its Title X network, MFHS launched a maternity medical home model in 2023 that combines a variety of health and social services to promote optimal health outcomes during pregnancy with wraparound services and postpartum, infant, and pediatric care. The program helps clients enroll in supportive services such as the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program for Women, Infants and Children (WIC), the Nurse-Family Partnership home visiting program, dental services, on-site lab and pharmacy services, ultrasound, care management for substance use disorders, behavioral health care, primary care, and pediatric care. The program has dedicated support counselors who visit postpartum clients after labor and delivery and provide a range of supports, including obtaining transportation vouchers for medical appointments and helping them obtain necessary prescriptions.

Did You Know?

MFHS partners with other federal programs to provide FP services in Pennsylvania. For example, it provides Title X funding to technical schools in Pennsylvania participating in the U.S. Department of Labor's Job Corps Program. As a subrecipient of MFHS, FP service delivery centers at these technical schools provide direct services to students, including STI screening and treatment, contraceptive methods and counseling, and pregnancy testing.

MFHS uses continuous quality improvement methods to enhance the care in its Title X network. The grantee has a program compliance team that provides technical assistance to subrecipients and service sites, and regularly reviews program data. If trends are suboptimal, MFHS meets with staff from the subrecipients or service sites to discuss the trends and conduct a series of plan-do-study-act cycles to improve the quality of care delivery at the sites.

To improve care for survivors of sexual assault, MFHS is partnering with Pennsylvania State University to pilot a sexual assault nurse examiner (SANE) training program for nurses in its Title X network. The SANE program will train nurses to conduct a forensic exam and a next-day trauma follow-up in the ambulatory care setting instead of the emergency room to avoid the stigma attached to seeking this care in an emergency room. The next-day model also helps ensure clients receive appropriate, timely follow-up.
