Innovations in Practice

PPAU has a long-standing relationship with the University of Utah, collaborating on research studies related to SRH service delivery and the Title X program. The study topics range from understanding client experiences with PPAU's clinic services to improving data quality in its electronic medical systems. PPAU also co-runs a medical fellowship program for clinicians providing SRH services, and provides technical assistance on data reporting requirements to Title X and other SRH-related grant programs.

Did You Know?

PPAU works with Utah 211, a free and confidential 24-hour hotline that provides information to callers about a range of community resources in the state, including housing and shelter, food, and health care clinics such as PPAU that provide SRH services. PPAU receives referrals from Utah 211 and has provided 211 callers with birth control, pregnancy testing, STI testing, and Pap smears.

PPAU provides extensive technical assistance to clinic staff on insurance billing to help ensure SRH services delivered to clients at PPAU clinics are billed appropriately and affordable. PPAU staff conduct in-person trainings at clinic sites and have developed resources such as reference sheets for clinic staff to use when checking out clients after appointments or processing insurance bills and other administrative paperwork. They train clinic staff to educate clients about their health insurance coverage to help ensure they are informed of their coverage benefits, deductibles, and any potential out-of-pocket costs to their care.

PPAU has extensive partnerships with several entities in the state, including the Association for Utah Community Health (AUCH), organizations in Park City, which has a large migrant population, and in major metropolitan areas such as Salt Lake City. AUCH has an extensive membership network of federally qualified health centers (FQHCs) throughout the state and helps connect clients receiving primary care at FQHCs to SRH services at PPAU. PPAU also partners with community organizations, public libraries, and hospitals in Park City and Salt Lake City to provide contraceptive counseling, education on adolescent health, and information on how to access SRH services provided by PPAU.
